

About Equator Education

Equator Education introduces Dr. Cindy Lovell, a self-professed "Twainiac." Cindy shows elementary, middle, and high school teachers how to use Mark Twain in their classrooms in unforgettable lessons that are easy to implement, relevant, engaging and challenging. Whether you read Twain daily or haven't read him at all, these workshops provide you with ready-to-go strategies for bringing America's most beloved author into the classroom on Monday morning. Spend an unforgettable Friday becoming re-energized to teach the classics.

And we promise...

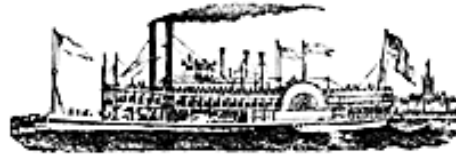

no whitewashing!

"Energized and engaging!"

Dr. Cindy Lovell is an Associate Professor of Education at Quincy University and serves as the Education Coordinator for the Mark Twain Museum.

"Dr. Lovell 'takes you places' when she talks. She is a master storyteller. For every concept she teaches, there is a story to go with it that makes you laugh or cry or both.

But... you will never forget!"

Kathleen Mickey Prescott, classroom teacher

What Teachers Say

- "I learned more in Dr. Lovell's workshop than in my combined education courses. Her presentations should be required in every school district."
Lynn Albinson, gifted science teacher
- "More energy and enthusiasm than you normally expect from a speaker. I feel completely re-energized and ready to go back to my classroom."
Elaine Beeghly, 5th grade gifted teacher
- "I've used Dr. Lovell's strategies in my classroom, and believe me, they work!"
Kristen Weaver, 6th grade gifted teacher
- "Dr. Lovell spoke to our women's group about Mark Twain and the women in his life - wife, daughters, etc. She is a powerful and engaging speaker. One of the best we've heard in many years!"
Pat Kershner, AAUW
